Real Estate Advice: When Spouses Divorce

Q. Sue, I am going through a divorce. Do you have any advice regarding our home?

A. The following advice is supplied to me by a Certified Divorce Financial Analyst, as common errors people make :

- 1. Not listing the real estate in the Summons and Petition.
Result: This might prevent you from getting a divorce, might prevent you from selling the property until you go back to court to amend and correct the decree, might result in your spouse getting more of a share of that property, and other problems.
- 2. Not using the correct "legal description" for the property or using the street address instead of the legal description.
Result: These are not enforceable.
- 3. Having verbal or written "side" agreements about the property that are not part of the divorce decree.
Result: These are not enforceable, and, if your ex-spouse changes his or her mind, you are out of luck.
- 4. Assuming you are not responsible for the mortgage because your ex-spouse was awarded the house.
Result: The court cannot order the lender to take your name off the mortgage.
- 5. Deeding the property between spouses before the divorce is final.
Result: Some people think that, if their spouse is not listed on the deed for the property, the property does not need to be part of the divorce proceedings, even if the deed is in only one name. Second, a deed between spouses during the marriage is not effective. Under the law, a spouse has a "marital interest" in all real estate owned by the other spouse. You cannot deed away that marital interest while still married to each other.

Testimonial Thank You Sue

Hello Sue ! When my brother Patrick wrote me that he had ran into you recently, I was inspired to reach out. Thank you for making our transition South seamless and for all the work you put into our sale during a pandemic. So glad to hear you are well and making Doylestown a consistent real estate Mecca. You are truly one of a kind Sue, and Denny and I wanted to send you some warm wishes. - Janet
